I understand a group but that should be confirmed by Bret if we say it.

Just got a breakout of who participated. Also, apparently threats were made twice

In two separate incidents the morning of August 17, three EPA employees, four EPA contractors, and two Coast Guard members providing alternative water for Navajo community members impacted by the Gold King Mine release were physically threatened by a community member in Shiprock, N.M. As a safety precaution, EPA immediately recalled employees from all field activities in the Shiprock area and notified the Navajo Nation police. Until this issue is resolved with local authorities, EPA has temporarily discontinued water distribution activities in the Shiprock area.

Earlier this morning, August 17, nine EPA employees providing alternative water for Navajo community members impacted by the Gold King Mine release were physically threatened by a community member in Shiprock, N.M. As a safety precaution, EPA immediately recalled employees from all field activities in the Shiprock area. EPA immediately notified the Navajo Nation police and the President of Navajo Nation. Until this issue is resolved with local authorities, EPA will not support water distribution activities in the area.

Q: Were these all EPA employees, or Coast Guard, too?

Subject: FW: Bret Moxley is calling tribal police now.

Importance: High

Our staff in Shiprock were threatened by the Chapter Ag Commissioner and others.

Bret has pulled all of our staff (9) in shiprock back to Farmington. He has called tribal police. Clancy has informed President's office.
